STEM Students Lead the Way

In the Capitol Rotunda

Project Lead the Way is an innovative curriculum that brings students into hands-on contact with science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM). A number of students brought their best displays to the Capitol Rotunda this week. We know that many of the jobs of the future will require significant familiarity with STEM concepts, and we know students do best down the road when they start early. This went way beyond the middle school science fair you may remember—these students are set for success!
